Pesticide derogation: Use of Cypermethrin in the Czech Republic

FSC reference code: FSC-DER-30-V1-0 EN Cypermethrin CZ 020610

Date: 02 June 2010

FSC Board Committee decision:

Approve the derogation application to use Cypermethrin against European spruce bark beetle (Ips typographus) in the Czech Republic, provided that the certificate holder:

1. Monitors and documents the occurrence of European spruce bark beetle (Ips typographus) in vulnerable spruce stands and after extreme weather events such as drought or storms,
2. Have records of the proportion of European spruce bark beetle control methods being achieved via the use of Cypermethrin and other non-highly hazardous control methods;
3. Creates a map indicating the vulnerability/susceptibility of individual forest management units to infestations of bark beetles,
4. Takes all the necessary measures – such as pheromone traps, tree traps, removal of wood with potential breeding sites (e.g. fallen tree stems after a storm) – to prevent the spreading of Ips typographus from smaller infested areas to other areas,
5. Improves logistics in a way that large amounts of logs (e.g. after storms in summer/spring) can be removed as fast as possible from the site, debarked, and be transported to sawing mills,
6. Applies Cypermethrin only outside of the stands preferably using tractor mounted sprayers,
7. Takes all necessary measures to protect pesticide users and the environment from pesticide exposure.
